

EXTREME STANDZ

By Derek Buono

There are a lot of car stands for you to choose from these days. You can get one in just about any material you can dream of and your wallet can afford. So when a simple, reasonably priced stand comes out, it may not attract the looks from fellow racers in the pits, but it will come in handy. Extreme Standz is a new company, and their handy Standz will help make working on your car easier.

Features

- Simple plastic piping construction
- Can be shaped to fit most any vehicle
- A magnetic strip to hold parts (as long as they are steel)
- Available in three colors (red, blue, black)

Testing

After a short assembly time and a short trip back to the days of playing with an Erector Set, my Extreme stand was ready to go.

The simple design makes it great if you have a variety of cars, since you can adjust the width of the stand to have a perfect fit. It includes enough pieces for you to experiment with the design. I liked how the parts tray pivots so it can be moved out of the way or forward for easy access.

Conclusion

It's not the most exciting product we've come across, but it does what it's designed to do: hold your vehicle for display or while you're wrenching. The versatility of the stand makes it a good choice for most vehicles. At a relatively low cost, it's definitely worth the cash if you don't have a quality car stand already. ◉

It looks like a set of plastic parallel bars.

The magnetic surface keeps screws from rolling away.

Extreme Standz also come with rubber pads to keep your vehicle from sliding off in the middle of a repair or tune up.

They are adaptable enough to allow you to work on almost any type of vehicle. They can even be used for those huge monster trucks that seem to be so popular these days.
